The Software may identify and obtain results solely based on the information input by Customer, including secret, non-public or otherwise sensitive information of Customer.

3.2. Based on Customer’s search query input, search results will be displayed (or returned, in the case of queries submitted via the application programming interface) to Customer. The search results displayed or returned by the Software may contain information collected from third-party sources. DarkOwl is not responsible for the content of these results. While search results may (or may not) be redacted by anonymizing certain characters to obscure certain information contained in the search results or to omit certain types of documents, this does not mean that DarkOwl necessarily reviews every search.
result or has control over the content of those results. The analysis, identification, collection and display of the search results will be subject to the terms of this EULA and OWL’s privacy policy, a copy of which is attached hereto.

3.3. Except as otherwise expressly stated in DarkOwl’s privacy policy, Customer has no right to or interest in any information input by Customer (including search queries submitted by Customer) or any information displayed or otherwise made available to Customer (including search results generated by the Software) in connection with Customer’s use of the Software. DarkOwl reserves the right to delete in an unrecoverable way any information input by Customer or search results generated in response to Customer’s use of the Software.
